

Group Transportation to DC for The Big One on Jan 6th: suggestions for buses, RVs, and similar

Made at the request of pedes from a comment in another post:

Anyone who rents things like buses, RVs, etc. wants to rent them and most will bend over backward to help groups get vehicles off their lots, especially in the winter slow season.

Here's a suggestion to make booking simple:

1. Contact your local bus/ RV rental place, bus charter provider. Ask THEM to help take payments from various people. This cuts out middle men, payment complexity, etc. and makes your reservation in one shot.
2. Direct everyone to the provider to make their payment.

Yup. Too many people are little more than keyboard warriors who think that upvotes= winning. Too many more are stuck in the "someone should do something!" mindset that has crippled this Republic. Someone is always YOU.

They don't matter. When we step up and take action, others will follow. Eventually, even some of the keyboard warriors might, once they are left behind and everyone is out marching instead of upvoting them.

Totally. I am so frustrated to see posts about driving, flying and booking a hotel room, and have never thought through the capacity of the logging, and transportation methods, not to mention BLM, Antifa, DC mayors can do all sort of things to block us from going into DC area.

Don't drive your own car, don't fucking fly in, don't book a hotel room for yourself!

important to avoid claiming the need for only transportation at that point in time that you're in

▼ I don't understand. I understand that a plane full of Trump supporters may get delayed or cancelled for reasons. You guys are saying that buses are the only way to go?

▼ Another suggestion: If you don't have enough people for a bus/ RV/ etc. yet... BE THE LEADER.

Make the call, as above, then post the information here and spread out the information via your friends and preferred communication methods (suggest NOT using Twitter, etc. since they will censor it and leftards will doxx your transport co.)

Lots of people are going to have the same questions about transport. Be a leader and give them an easy option to sign up with.

▼ Also: When contacting a transportation provider, remember that they deal with groups all the time. Ask them for information about groups in your area that you can coordinate with.
